BUICK
Eight Convertible

The Buick Eight Convertible is one of the most iconic cars of the 50's. In 1947 the Buick Convertible was one of James Dean's favourite cars.

In 1948 a total of 108,521 Buick Eights were manufactured, and in 1947, 159,588 . It has an eight-cylinder, linearly-mounted engine (hence the name of the car), which supplies 107 hp. The bonnet, seats and windows are automatically controlled with a hydraulic system.

Few cars are as original and authentic as this model, popularised by films like Grease. When we speak of the Buick Eight Convertible , we are talking about one of the most spacious cars, with the most spectacular lines, that exist; it is so wide that it can easily accommodate 6 passengers . The gear lever is located on the steering wheel, so that there is room for 3 people in front .
